How Idahoans Can Support California Wildfire Relief Efforts

In response to the devastating wildfires that have displaced nearly 200,000 people in and around Los Angeles, community foundations across California have activated rapid response funds to provide critical relief and support to impacted communities. Idahoans who want to contribute to community-led efforts can donate to the following foundation-led wildfire relief funds:

Community Foundation Relief Funds

1. California Community Foundation's Wildfire Recovery Fund
Supports long-term recovery relief for underserved communities, including Native American, Muslim, migrant, and non-native English-speaking populations, as well as vulnerable groups such as children, the elderly, and individuals with disabilities.
2. Pasadena Community Foundation's Eaton Canyon Fire Relief and Recovery Fund
Provides immediate and mid-term support for recovery efforts in the Pasadena area.
3. Kern Community Foundation's Borel Fire Relief Fund
Supports relief and rebuilding efforts for those affected by the Borel Fire in Kern County.

These community foundations are working closely with local nonprofits and first responders to bridge financial gaps and ensure aid reaches those in greatest need.

Additional Resources

- Habitat for Humanity (California Chapters): Assisting with rebuilding homes and providing temporary shelter.

- California Fire Foundation: Supporting firefighters and families of those affected by wildfires.
- World Central Kitchen: Providing meals to displaced residents and first responders.
- American Red Cross: Offering shelter, supplies, and disaster relief services across the impacted regions. Visit the Red Cross Wildfire Response Updates page to learn more about how you can help.
